The Continuation Of An Idea

By Ken Apschinkat,
Park Historian

(The second in a series of articles on the National Parks Centennial and the National Park System.)

Appomattox Court House National Historical Park has a touch with early national park history. Just seven years after the terms of surrender were signed in the McLean House the world's first national park was established by President U.S. Grant. Grant at that time had no idea he would be establishing a concept which would continue into the 20th century.

The concept of a national park in America was first realized when Yellowstone National Park was opened to the public in the late 1800's. Although the administration of the 2 million acre park was under the Department of the Interior a detail of U. S. Army troops was stationed in Yellowstone in 1886 to protect the irreplaceable resources. Visitors to the park were quite sparse in the formative years because of its wilderness condition and lack of adequate transportation. A couple of early visitors were even killed by Nez Perce' Indian warriors in Yellowstone. As time went on the park was developed and conditions improved.

By the turn of the century other areas in the West of scenic beauty and natural wonder were set aside by Congress for the American people, Yosemite, General Grant (later included in Kings Canyon), and Sequoia in California and Mt. Rainier in Washington were "children" of Yellowstone. Early parks were generally established as the result of local action by a few interested citizens concerned with preserving these great natural wonders from being spoiled by man. Early efforts to preserve archeological and historical areas began with the preservation act by Congress of the Casa Grande Indian ruins in Arizona. From 1890-92 five important Civil War battlefields were also preserved as national military parks. This was the first great effort to preserve areas in the East.

Due to the damage done by vandals and souvenir hunters at Mesa Verde in southwestern Colorado Congress passed the Antiquities Act of 1906. This piece of legislation is extremely important to the preservation of archeological and historical sites throughout the United States. Along with preserving Indian ruins in the Southwest it also protected historic objects on public lands in America. This act is still a part of our laws today. The historic objects at Appomattox Court House National Historical Park are protected because of this enactment over to proclaim as national monuments any land owned or acquired by the Federal government that contained historic landmarks, historic or scientific interest. Eighty - four national monuments were established under this and other acts by the President. Appomattox Count House was established as a national historical monument in 1935. Later the name was changed to Appomattox Court House National Historical Park.

Many other national parks were established in those formative years of the National Park System from 1872-1916 including Grand Canyon, Crater Lake, Wind Cave, and Hot Springs. Those early periods of administration and preservation were trying years for the young national parks. No central organization ierated the parks until 1916 when Congress established the National Park Service. The third article of this series will deal with Stephen T. Matther and the National Park Service.

As part of the National Parks Centennial celebration medallions in silver and bronze will be sold to commemorate the 36 national parks of our nation. The postage stamp of Yellowstone is now available at most post offices, and stamps representing the four types of national park areas -- natural, historical, recreational and cultural-- will be available this year. We as Americans should take great pride in our national parks. They are ours to enjoy and preserve now and for future generations.

Kings Downs Va. Grill 15-11

Kings Market got off to a 6-1 lead in the first inning and then staged another five run rally in the sixth inning to beat Va. Grill 15-11 last week in a Class A league softball game in Lynchburg. The win now gives Kings Market a 6-4 mark for the season.

Kings batted around in the first inning as they scored six runs with a bases loaded triple by Bruce Daniel being the big blow. They got two more in the third and two in the fourth and five in the sixth. In the sixth Buddy Wilcox tripled and scored on Franklin Hall's double. Ray Fox then singled and Billy Thompson hit a three run homer and Charles Clark followed with a solo blast.

Va. Grill came to within one run, 10-9, at the end of five innings, but the five run outbreak in the sixth upped the lead to four after Grill got two in their half of the sixth. A big double play by Buddy Wilcox in the seventh halted a Va. Grill rally.

Ray Fox led Kings with four hits and Earl Martin, Buddy Wilcox and Billy Thompson each had three hits. Doug Mitchell and Charles Clark each had two hits in the 21 hit attack.

Kings Loses Out In Old Dominion Tournament

The Pizza House of Charlottesville, beat Kings Market 25-6 in the opening round of the Old Dominion Tournament. Altavista then beat Kings 6-3 in the second game. A field of 16 teams entered the tournament with some of the top teams in the area competing as well as top teams in the country.

The Pizza House banged out 28 hits and took advantage of the wet field in scoring a very impressive win over Kings.

Kings scored in the first inning and the Pizza House tied it in the bottom of the inning. In the second inning Kings fell behind 2-1 and in the fifth and sixth inning Kings could do nothing right and the Pizza House scored 18 runs in the two innings.

Doug Mitchell got three hits to lead Kings and Alton Harris and Franklin Hall each had two.

All of Kings Markets hits were mostly scattered and their runs came hard. The wet ground caused many errors that paved the way for the Pizza House as they took advantage of them.

In the Altavista game, Kings could not get the hit when it was needed as they had runners in every inning except one. Altavista got three in the third, two in the fourth for a 5-0 lead and one in the fifth for their six runs. Kings scored in the sixth one time and a home run by Donnie Clements and two hits that followed gave Kings all their scoring.

Alton Harris and Clements led the Kings attack with two hits each.
